Slipknot – one of the most visually theatrical, bizarre and renowned speed metal acts in the universe – used 30 Robe ColorSpot 1200 ATs to great effect on their "Subliminal Verses" tour, specified by lighting designer Jason Cain.

It was the first time that Cain has used Robe fixtures – but it certainly won't be the last he asserts, stating that next time he intends to use lots more Robe's on the rig!

Lighting equipment for their recently concluded 2 month US tour was supplied by Gemini Stage Lighting from Dallas, Texas.

He used the ColorSpot 1200s for stunning beam and colour effects. "I like the brightness, strobe rate, pan/tilt and the gobo selection" says Cain, noting that you get the standard range of gobos plus ten additional – all of which are inventive and different. He also likes the colour mixing properties and reckons that the 1200s are far brighter than similar comparable moving light brands.

The ColorSpot 1200 is the most powerful hard edge light in the current Robe AT series. It's continues to grow in popularity as a main fixture for concerts, tours, television shows and festival and events of all types.

Cain's crew members also liked the Robes which proved themselves highly reliable and robustly built, "They did well over the two month tour" says show Technician John Johnson, "We had no real hardware issues, the lamps are bright and they ride well in the (Xtreme) trussing". Lighting electrician Dennis Waite adds, "The multi-position pan/tilt locks are good and the overall solidity of the fixture is great. I certainly prefer them to other similar competitive products".

Slipknot will be playing selected dates in Europe and will be returning to tour the US again in the fall.
